

Dear, Sir

I have seen information on volunteering for international summer camps and organizing activities for teens on your website. I am writing to apply for this role.

I am a Russian student at ITMO University, where I study programming. Programming is not just about writing code. It is about communication between people.

Constant learning of the new is the norm in our time. This skill is significant. I already know Russian and English. With this ability, I can learn a few simple phrases. They will help me communicate with guys from other countries.

In the past, I have been in many camps, including multinational ones. I am sure that when communicating with people from other countries, I behave especially. If you have some problems, I will understand them accurately and help you to solve them.

The organization of activities is hard work. You should know what is popular in our time. I am not so old. I recognize some memes and jokes of our time. The guys will be comfortable with me, and they will talk to me as if I was one of them. It is significant when you have a group of different fellows.

I would be more than pleased to spend my time working as a volunteer. I'm convinced I could make a valuable contribution to your plan.

Should you need any further information, please contact to me.

Respectfully yours,
Artyom Fadeyev
