Luck and unluck have always been a part of our life. These superstitions appeared in the distant past. People make various talismans, go to "experts" on luck, and many other things. Why are they doing that? In this way, they try to win more luck on their side. I am not a supporter of all this, despite this, good moments also happen in my life. I thought for a long time that this happened to me.

Before entering the university, I was very keen on computer science olympiads. So at one of the olympiads I was lucky to beat my opponent by 1 point, this happened because I submitted the problem before him. This changed everything. The diploma began with my score. I can't describe in words the emotions that I experienced at that time. Would not say that it strongly depended on me, rather on my opponents with the number of solved problems and the time of their delivery, but also with luck.
